Please inform all graduate students who will be TAs for the first time in Fall 2016 or Spring 2017:

The 2016 TA Orientation: Teaching Symposium for First-Time TAs and IAs will occur on

Wednesday, August 24, 2016
8:30 a.m. - 2:00 pm
Arts & Sciences Laboratory Sciences Bldg.
Danforth Campus

Co-sponsored by The Teaching Center, The Graduate School of Arts & Sciences, and the Division of Biological and Biomedical Sciences.

Attendance is required for all graduate students who will be Teaching Assistants (TAs) or Instructional Aides (IAs) for the first time in 2016 - 2017.

Through interactive discussion and teaching workshops, TA Orientation will . . .

• Help to prepare TAs and IAs for their first experience teaching at the University.

• Provide an opportunity for new TAs and IAs to learn effective teaching strategies, including strategies for creating and maintaining a safe, fair, inclusive learning environment.

• Inform new TAs and IAs about campus resources, including Teaching Center workshops and professional-development programs for graduate students.

• Provide an opportunity for new TAs and IAs to meet with experienced TAs in their disciplines.
